“Finding Fulfillment: Life Lessons in Constructing a Health Sciences Career Path”

Dr. Andrew Hunt is a rural Family and Emergency Medicine physician practicing in Newfoundland and Labrador. A graduate of Memorial's MD and Family Medicine Residency Programs, Dr. Hunt prides himself in helping to fulfill the mandate of social accountability in his province. He returned to his hometown of Twillingate, NL in 2011 where he began his medical career and continues to practice today. For over 13 years, Dr. Hunt has supported rural medicine through contributions as a physician leader. He has held many leadership positions such as Rural Chief of Staff, Department Chief of Family Medicine, Senior Medical Officer and Vice President of Medical Services within his regional health authority. Dr. Hunt is currently the Newfoundland and Labrador representative for the Society of Rural Physicians of Canada Council and is the Assistant Dean of Distributed Medical Education with Memorial University's Faculty of Medicine. Through these roles, Dr. Hunt continues to advocate for rural medicine and medical education. Dr. Hunt is a proud father of three, a loving husband, and is devoted to enhancing the health and well-being of all of those around him. He is an avid outdoorsman and enjoys any new adventure that life brings his way.
